CUT IN ARMY SIZE ALTERS GARB DATE

The Army has changed from 1 October to 1 November the mandatory date for wear of Army Green and Army Blue uniforms by officers and warrant officers.

Why the one month extension? It's because of the current cut-back. The Army is selecting about 1500 officers for involuntary release. They are to be notified by mid-October.

Thus, no officer will be required to buy new uniforms, only to learn in several weeks of his release from active duty.

Wear of the Army Green and Army Blue uniforms by officers and warrant officers will be optional until 1 Nov. and the officers' olive drab uniform (pinks and greens) may be worn by officers and warrant officers at their option during the appropriate seasons until that date.

Officers and warrant officers scheduled for separation from the active Army prior to the beginning of the 1958 summer uniform season or before 1 May 1958, in areas where the winter uniform is prescribed for wear the year-round, continue to be exempted from the new uniform requirements, and may wear the olive drab uniforms until separation.

Pentagon Leadership Changes Coincide With Force Level Cuts; Services Are Pointed To 2.5 Million Strength In Next Budget

ADMIRAL ARTHUR RADFORD, departing JCS Chairman, receives a special scroll from departing Secretary Wilson on behalf of the Armed Forces Policy Council as General Nathan F. Twining, the JCS Chairman-designate looks on. Ceremonies were held 2 August at Ft. McNair, Washington, D. C.

Inflation has forced a checkrein on military plans for the long pull.

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson's successor, Neil H. McElroy (see Page 3) and JCS Chairman-designate General Nathan F. Twining, USAF, face the formidable task of refitting a $40 billion national security program to a $38 billion budget limit.

With defense costs rising steadily and at a higher clip than is the case for the general economy, the new Defense Department team plainly will have no alternative but to make additional cuts.

Secretary Wilson's order for a 100,000 reduction in manpower by the end of the year will be followed by further personnel cuts early next year—if not before—provided no new tensions develop on the international scene.

The Pentagon is driving towards a fiscal '59 budget that will provide for 2,500,000 men, about 300,000 less than at the start of this fiscal year.

And it became apparent this week that the manpower cuts, even at the 100,000 level, will force changes in the force structure.

THE NAVY said it plans to mothball 60 ships during the next five months, including the battleship USS Iowa, eight destroyers, 16 destroyer escorts, two submarines, two attack transports, three high speed transports, five LST's, two attack cargo ships, seven mine hunters, 13 coastal mine sweepers and one fleet mine sweeper.

THE AIR FORCE, its 137-wing program long since shot down and converted to a 128-wing structure, will revamp its wings again in face of a 25,000 manpower loss by the end of the year and an urgent re-

Pay Hearing Hopes Still Flicker On Hill

There's still hope that a Senate Armed Services Subcommittee will launch military pay raise hearings this summer.

A decision was to be made with the completion of action on civil rights legislation whether to start the hearings this month or early next year.

There's no chance at all, of course, for a detailed examination of the problem this year, but some legislators, led by Senators Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) and Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) are urging that at least a beginning be made while Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson is still in office.

THE AIR FORCE ASSOCIATION at its 11th annual convention adopted a resolution urging Congress to take "immediate and favorable action" on legislation introduced by Senators Symington and Goldwater and by Representative James Van Zandt (R-Pa.) and others in the House.

The AFA made the pay issue the No. 2 resolution, preceded only by an appeal for the President, Secretary of Defense and Congress "to take the steps necessary to insure that the nation shall attain and maintain an Air Force second to none in the world, in terms of both

Opinions On Use Of Heavy Tank "Sharply Divided"; Army Criticized For Contract

Military leaders don't see eye to eye on the role of big tanks on atomic battlefields.

This statement by the House Government Operations Committee is contained in a report on military tank procurement.

The report is critical of the Army for spending millions of dollars for heavy tanks under a "loosely worded contract" which resulted in delayed delivery dates and unacceptable vehicles.

The Army's excuse, the Committee said, was that the tank deficiencies resulted from "the emergency production program brought on by the Korean conflict."

This excuse "follows an old pattern and contains an important element of truth," the Committee said. "The United States has never entered a major war equipped with the required minimum of all essential military equipment. The result is a telescoped development-production program which invariably leads to weapons which have deficiencies requiring subsequent modification."

However, the report states, there is no clear indication that the Army would have pursued a vigorous research and development program in the heavy tank field had funds been available before the emergency. "Opinions within the military are too sharply divided on the usefulness of the heavy tank in modern warfare."

The Committee said the facts demonstrate that the Army "has only a half-hearted conviction about the use of heavy tanks."

As a result of its study, the Committee has recommended a further investigation of the problem by the Comptroller General to determine how well the Government's interest was served in various phases of the Army's tank contract with the Chrysler Corporation.

Senate Gives Its OK To 3730 Army Names

The Senate has confirmed 3,730 Army nominations below the rank of general.

The only Army nominations still pending are a small number of junior officers and the new general officer nominations which were submitted to the Senate this week and published in this issue of THE JOURNAL.

The Senate also confirmed the nomination of Maj. Gen. Edgar C. Erickson to continue as Chief of the National Guard Bureau through 23 June 1961.

General White Foresees Further Cuts In TAC, Cites Army Atomic Weapons

A further paring of the Tactical Air Forces may have to be made, asserted General Thomas D. White in his first major policy statement since assuming duties as Air Force Chief of Staff.

In a speech before the 11th Annual Convention of the Air Force Association, General White said that "... as we enter an era of intense competition for funds between various weapon systems that tactical requirement must be very carefully screened to insure that we retain only essential forces."

The Chief of Staff stated that "as Army atomic weaponry develops, it logically reduces the close air support function of the Tactical Air Force."

At the same time, he told his audience, "allied forces have been furnished extensively with effective weapons. Sufficient time has passed since we started our assistance programs to permit training and development of allied forces. In NATO especially, there has been a maturing of forces operating under unified direction within a common deterrent concept."

"I think it logical that we recognize the military potential and good faith of our allies and plan accordingly."

The General said that reliance on our Allies should be principally in non-atomic areas.

In assessing the capability of Allied Forces, he stated, a realistic reassessment of U. S. forces must be made. The objective of the reassessment is to determine which forces are essential as a complement to Allied strength.

"US duplication of allied strengths will not advance the collective security," General White emphasized.

The Air Reserve and Air National Guard Forces are subject to the "same close scrutiny" as are the Tactical Air Forces, he said.

"We must tighten the reserve program to provide better support for fewer wings instead of lesser support for a greater number of wings," The Chief of Staff told the Convention.

"As one examines the threat today to U. S. security, one immediately senses the impact of that threat on the U. S. Air Force. We know our task and we have faced up to it in light of today's realities and tomorrow's expectations."

"What of the impact of this threat and our agreed deterrent strategy on the entire military establishment?"

"The other services have some rigorous self-examination to do and face still more in the future, just as we do."

"I cannot say with candor that an overall adjustment to the present era, equivalent to the Air Force adjustment, has been made. I believe it will be made, however, and I hope in good time."

Such readjustments must be made, General White said, in light of the fact that "resources are critical."

Reductions must be made "even at the cost of sacrificing some elements of capabilities which are desirable, but not vital, in support of the survival forces."

"We have had to face the fact that the perfect air defense system is in the realm of theory; that no air defense in being or presently possible can completely stop a determined nuclear attack. We have faced this fact and are building as effective an air defense as we can afford without running into the law of diminishing returns."

Capt. Kincheloe Gets Trophy From CofS, M/Sgt. Bachetti Also Cited For Heroism

The Mackay Trophy was presented to Capt. Ivan C. Kincheloe, Jr., USAF, by General Thomas D. White, Chief of Staff, as a feature of the Air Force Association's Airpower Symposium Luncheon 2 August at the Sheraton Park Hotel, Washington, D. C.

General White also presented the Cheney Award to M/Sgt. Leonard J. Bachetti, assigned to a MSTs squadron at Charleston AFB, S. C.

Captain Kincheloe was honored for a conspicuous act of courage in connection with the rocket-powered Bell X-2 experimental aircraft. On 7 Sept. 1956 he "... pressed well beyond the highest altitude ever before achieved in a piloted airplane ... extended the known boundaries of altitude flight and made available to the aviation science valuable information for the design of future aircraft." He is Experimental Flight Test Officer at the AF Flight Test Center, Edwards AFB, Calif.

Sergeant Bachetti received the Cheney Award for an act of self sacrifice in a humanitarian interest. He was first on the scene of a crash of a C-124 aircraft on 3 Oct. 1956, at Charleston AFB. He led two dazed men from the area of the flaming plane. He also carried an injured man from the tail section of the plane and entered the cockpit to free a navigator who was strapped to his seat. He also helped to remove two other persons from the wreckage.

FIVE CITATIONS OF HONOR were presented to individuals who distinguished themselves during the year in the interest of military and civilian aviation. Outgoing AFA President John P. Henebry presented citations to the following:

Brig. Gen. Sam Maddux, Jr., Deputy Commander of the newly reorganized Flying Training Air Force under ATC at Randolph AFB, Tex.; M/Sgt. Robert F. Anderson, an Air Force Recruiter in Mesa, Ariz.; Mr. Perry Wolff, who wrote, edited and produced Columbia Broadcasting System's TV Series "Airpower"; the Harvard Defense Studies Program; and, Kiwanis International.

Present at the Luncheon were "outstanding airmen" representing 18 major commands. They were recognized for invaluable contributions to the AF mission and represented the approximately 775,000 airmen in the Air Force. They are:

M/Sgt. Curtis L. Jackson, Flight Chief, 497 Fighter Interceptor Squadron, Geiger Field, Spokane, Wash.;

M/Sgt. Jesse O. Anthony, Supply Supervisor, 3134 Stock Control Squadron, Chateauroux AMA, France;

M/Sgt. John N. Edensfield, Information Specialist, Headquarters Squadron, Air Proving Ground Command, Eglin AFB, Fla.;

M/Sgt. George A. Post, Project Engineer, Aero Medical Lab, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio;

M/Sgt. Albert S. Fisher, Flight Chief, 3525 Combat Crew Training Wing, Williams AFB, Ariz.;

T/Sgt. Lyman C. Long, Medical Technician, School of Aviation Medicine, Gunter AFB, Ala.;

The New SecDef

Neil Hosler McElroy, nominated by President Eisenhower to be the next Secretary of Defense, shows a marked background similarity to Secretary Charles E. Wilson.

Both are Ohio-born, top-level industrialists. Neither had any previous military experience before their nomination to the nation's top defense post.

In each case, Congressional concern was manifested over a possible conflict of interest between the nominees' large business holdings and the impartiality desired for the civilian head of the Department of Defense.

Born in Beria, Ohio, in 1904, the incoming Secretary is the son of Malcolm Ross and Susan Harriet (Hosler) McElroy. His father was a high school physics teacher.

He attended East High School, near Wichrow, Ohio, and upon graduation won a scholarship to Harvard University.

Graduating from Harvard, he joined Procter and Gamble where he was successively promoted until he reached the P & G Presidency in 1948.

In addition to his post with Procter and Gamble, Mr. McElroy is a Director of the General Electric and Chrysler Corporations.

His membership in civic organizations includes the National Citizens Commission on the Public Schools, Community Chest, Cincinnati Citizens Development Committee and various other organizations.

Married to the former Camilla Fry of Terrace Park, Ohio, he has a daughter, Barbara, the wife of Air Force Lt. David Dimling. Two other children, Nancy and Malcolm.

USAF Chapel Called Almost "Sacrilegious" But Gets Approval In Final House Vote

The proposed chapel for the new Air Force Academy again was subject of heated debate this week in the House of Representatives.

Congressmen opposing the design of the $3 million structure charged that it is not only "peculiar" and "garish" but a "monstrosity" which "almost comes to the point of looking like it might be sacrilegious."

Representative Errett P. Scrivner (R-Kans.), a member of the USAF Academy Board of Visitors, led a drive to prevent the Air Force from spending any fiscal '58 construction funds on the Academy chapel. He gained an initial success, but failed to block construction of the edifice.

He said the "polished aluminum cathedral with 19 spires" is "incompatible with the natural beauty" of the Colorado Rockies.

The proposed structure has been a matter of controversy since the first designs were submitted more than three years ago.

Chairman George H. Mahon (D-Tex.) of the House Appropriations Committee urged approval of the construction. He said he realizes the structure is "a bit futuristic and modernistic" but "the best architects in America have worked on this chapel design."

Congressman Mahon noted that the other Air Force Academy buildings "will not be spectacular in design and the unconventional configuration of the chapel might very well brighten up the place and add a needed tone." He added that the chapel "will stand out."

Congressman Scrivner said it "will look like a row of polished tepees."

Congressman Jamie L. Whitten (D-Miss.) said the design for the chapel "is not different, it is peculiar."

Congressman Walt Horan (R-Wash.) suggested that perhaps the structure should be shipped to Disneyland. Mr. Whitten agreed that would be a fitting place for it.

Congressman Daniel J. Flood (R-Pa.) defended the structure. He assured his colleagues that "when the 19 spires that were spoken of so lightly rise to the heavens of the Rockies, as they do in these plans, and when you see the teeth of the white-capped Rockies match the spires of this beautiful chapel at the airbase, then every requirement of your esthetic senses will be met to the fullest."

Congressman Whitten said the spires do not look quite so much like spires as they do "an extended accordion with ribs across it."

In a tentative vote, 102 to 53, the House approved the Scrivner proposal to eliminate the chapel construction, but rejected the amendment on the final vote.

Three Wait Rank After Senate O.K.

The Senate confirmed the nomination of three temporary major generals and 11 brigadier generals 5 August and the Army immediately promoted all but three of them.

Brig. Gen. Frank McA. Albrecht and Ralph J. Butchers were advanced to temporary major general, but Brig. Gen. Sidney Wooten, new Ft. Devens, Mass., CG, must wait for a vacancy.

The new brigadier generals are Carl W. Tempel, John B. Sullivan, George W. Power, James A. Richardson, Charles G. Dunn, Edward E. Ehlen, Edward F. Penaat, James D. Alger and Autrey J. Maroun.

Confirmed but waiting promotion to brigadier general are Cols. Clifton F. Von Kann and Frederick G. Waite.

TWO RETIRING LIEUTENANT GENERALS, Stanley R. Mickelsen, head of the Army Air Defense Command at Ent AFB, Colo., and David A. D. Ogden, The Inspector General, were confirmed for three-star rank on the retired list.

President Asks Stars For Two Tennesseans

President Eisenhower has requested the Senate to approve the promotions of two Tennesseans to one and two star rank in the Army Reserve.

Nominated for reserve major general was Brig. Gen. Robert E. Frankland, CG of the Tennessee 30th Armored Division. Col. Clarence B. Johnson, Jr., 30th Armored Division Artillery C. O., was named for brigadier general.

GENERAL W. G. WYMAN (left), Commanding General, U. S. Continental Army Command, pins the Army Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant on Col. Horace K. Whalen for "meritorious service." The past four years, Colonel Whalen, who is leaving for a military attache assignment in Japan, was a leader in the development, design and implementation of procedures, systems and organization adopted by Army combat developments. He was deputy to the Deputy Commanding General.

SHARP TALLY

Head coach and team captain is Lt. Col. William A. Hancock.

The high frontier

Far to the north of settlements, roads and railways, DEW line outposts stand guard over America. They were built with the help of Fairchild C-123 transports, which flew in the men and the construction material—even the radar antennas which now scan the arctic skies.

The C-123 commuter service to the DEW line goes on at the rate of up to eight tons of cargo per plane—and at the end of the line the landing strips have proven too rough, too hazardous for any other heavy-duty transport now in service.

The members of this polar bear club have come to depend on the C-123—just as the U. S. Armed Forces everywhere. The C-123 shares these qualities with other Fairchild aircraft: ruggedness, reliability, and ever increasing utility.

He has 40 years' service—three in the Navy, 37 in the Marine Corps.

Navy Sends 5 Officers To Sub Skipper's School

The Navy has assigned five submarine officers to the Prospective Submarine Commanding Officers' Course at Pacific Fleet Submarine Force Headquarters, Pearl Harbor.

The "PCO School," conducted by Cdr. Frank Andrews, Force Tactical Development Officer, trains officers in underwater tactics and new weapons firing methods.

The class, which graduates on 23 August, is comprised of the following officers:

Lieutenant Commanders Richard J. Cooke, Prospective Commanding Officer of the Pearl Harbor-based USS Cusk, and Robert G. Douglas, PCO of the San Diego-based USS Bass; and Lieutenants Hayden Owens, Jr., Executive Officer of the Pearl Harbor-based USS Tiru, Robert H. Blount, XO of the Pearl Harbor-based USS Cusk, and Harold D. Barker, from 12th Naval District Headquarters.

DCNO (Air) Aide Retires

Administrative Assistant and Secretary to the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Air), Miss Gertrude E. Baker, known far and wide in Naval Aviation circles, has been retired with special ceremonies after 39 years of service.

Naval Aviation leaders and her co-workers, in paying tribute to Miss Baker's work, gave her a silver bowl, appropriately inscribed, in appreciation of her long and faithful service to the cause of U. S. Naval Aviation.

Navy-Marine Corps "Hump" Proposal Poses Questions—Here Are Some Of The Answers

Numerous questions about the proposed legislation to erase the Navy's promotion "hump" have been posed in correspondence to THE JOURNAL.

Here are answers to some of the most frequent questions:

Q—Does the legislation provide that captains who have been selected for that rank on a "best fitted" basis will again be subjected to one or more selections after five years in grade to determine if they are to continue on active duty as captains?

A—Under certain circumstances, yes. The proposal authorizes the Navy, when the needs of the Service require, to convene boards to recommend for continuation on active duty Regular Navy captains and Regular Marine Corps colonels who have completed at least five years in grade. They will be subject to such consideration only once, however. If not selected, they will be retired.

Q—Under the law is there any limit to the number of captains who can be so retired? Are there any legal safeguards to prevent wholesale retirement of five-year captains, especially during periods of drastic cuts in the Armed Services?

A—There is no limit. However, the plan as designed will operate only against those captains who made that rank with little attrition. Many captains have 8 to 10 years' service in grade. It is anticipated that the continuation boards will be discontinued after the "hump" has been smoothed out. By that time, commanders will be put up for selection to captain in their 24th or 25th year as contemplated by the Officer Personnel Act, which means that by the time they have five years in grade they will have completed 30 years' service.

Q—How much notice, if any, will be given to a captain "chosen" to retire?

A—He will be aware when he has completed five years in grade and when continuation boards are convened. Although plans are not yet firm, it is anticipated that such boards will meet early in the fiscal year, and those selected will be retired at the end of the fiscal year.

Q—Under what circumstances will captains be required to retire prior to 30 years? Will it be on the basis of two successive passovers at the end of five years' service?

A—The five-years-in-grade provision is separate and distinct from the twice-passed over provision. The plan proposes that captains and colonels shall be retired when they complete 20 or more years of total commissioned service and have twice failed of selection.

Q—Does the two-times-and-out rule apply to all captains?

A—No. The Medical, Dental, Medical Service and Nurse Corps are excluded. Also, Marine Corps supply duty colonels may be retained on a year to year basis beyond the date they would normally be retired under the new law until they complete 31 years of service, "if necessary to meet Marine Corps requirements."

Q—In computing retired pay under the new plan, does over six months count another year for total commissioned service?

A—Yes. That part of a year which is less than six months is disregarded.

Q—Does enlisted service count in the computation of retired pay under the new plan?

A—Yes. Enlisted service counts in the computation of basic pay and would thus count in the computation of retired pay.

Marine Corps Moves Infantry From Japan

The "Striking Ninth" Regiment—the last Regiment of the Third Marine Division in Japan—has begun a shift to Okinawa where it will join the Third Regiment.

About 7,000 officers and men are involved in the move.

The First Marine Air Wing remains in Japan. It is 6,400 strong.

The Marine Corps said the move is "in keeping with the joint statement issued on 21 June 1957, by the President and Prime Minister Kishi that members of U. S. Forces in Japan will be substantially reduced within the next year, including a prompt withdrawal of all U. S. ground combat forces.

The Third Division is part of Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, and is under operational control of VAdm. Wallace M. Beakley, Commander, U. S. Seventh Fleet.

The Fourth Marine Regiment, formerly a unit of the Third Division, is stationed in Hawaii as part of the 1st Marine Brigade.

The historic Ninth Regiment, led by Col. Clyde R. Nelson, was organized at Quantico, Va., in 1917. During WWII, the Ninth fought in the Bougainville, Guam and Iwo Jima campaigns.

Colonel Nelson, a 1934 graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, resides with his wife, Louise, and their two children, at 4616 North 16th Street, Arlington, Va.

CAPT. KIRN'S STORY

"I met Captain Kirn only once, but I love him because he saved my life."

These are the words of a small boy who gained faith to conquer a rare ascending paralysis through the courageous example of Capt. Louis J. Kirn, USN, USNA '32.

The story of Captain Kirn's fight to conquer the disease and how it affected small Chuckie LaPlante of Toledo, Ohio, will be told on Telephone Time over ABC Television, 20 August, at 9:30 p.m. EDT and PDT (8:30 p.m. in other time zone).

Man's electro-mechanical partners are bringing his ideas to life faster...better...at less cost

Today one of industry's most formidable tasks is to streamline and shorten the time-consuming process that transforms ideas into exciting new products.

Never in man's history has this embryonic period needed to be shortened more than now—when technological superiority could very well be the world's best hope for peace.

And nowhere is this challenge being met more energetically than in the development and production of automatic control systems at AUTONETICS. For instance, Numill—a new automatic machine-tool system invented by AUTONETICS—often turns the engineer's rough sketch and mathematical notations into prototype parts more rapidly than he could reach the blueprint stage with previous methods.

Standardized "postage-stamp" circuits allow engineers to mockup even highly advanced designs almost as simply as they would plug in an electric shaver. And AUTONETICS' data processing equipment can simulate a wide range of operational missions, as well as solve the most involved mathematical problems in minutes instead of days.

AUTONETICS' ability to save time and money between concept and product delivery is reflected in every area of its electro-mechanical technology: flight controls, inertial navigation, armament controls, computers, and other complete systems for the military and industry.

For detailed information, write AUTONETICS, Dept. J-74, 9150 E. Imperial Highway, Downey, California.

AF FISCAL CHIEFS—Lt. Gen. Manuel J. Asensio, Comptroller at Air Force headquarters in Washington, D. C., arrived recently at Wiesbaden, Germany, for conferences with staff members at U. S. Air Forces in Europe headquarters. He was met by Maj. Gen. Thomas R. Rampey (center), USAF Comptroller, who returns to the U. S., and Maj. Gen. Walter I. Miller (right), former Air Force Director of Accounting and Finance, who will succeed General Rampey in the USAF job.

Manned Airplane Will Always Be Needed, General White Tells Night Fighters

Human capabilities such as those exemplified by the night fighters and by our present fighter-interceptor teams, will continue to have a vital place in our air defense team, according to General Thomas D. White, new Chief of Staff of the Air Force.

General White made the statement in presenting the Hughes Achievement Award, given annually to the outstanding air defense squadron, to the 512th Fighter Interceptor Squadron stationed at RAF Station Bentwaters in Great Britain. The squadron flies North American F-86D Sabre interceptors equipped with Hughes Aircraft Co. radar armament systems.

Presentation of the award by General White was a feature of the Seventh Annual Reunion luncheon of the Night Fighter Association in Washington, D. C., 3 August in connection with the Air Force Association convention.

The award was accepted by Lt. Col. John J. Ruettgers, USAF, Commander of the 512th, who introduced the officers who accompanied him from England for the occasion. They were: Col. Hugh P. Manson, commander 406th Wing, Mansston, England; Capt. Cecil A. Laxton, 512th operations officer; Capt. Jay A. Daugherty, armament and electronic officer; Capt. Roy A. Sweigard, maintenance officer; M/Sgt. John W. White, NCOIC armament and electronics; and M/Sgt. Edwin H. Christy, maintenance line chief, and RAF Flight Lt. Ronald S. Williams, their G.C.I. controller. Also with the group was Mr. Harold Anderson, Hughes technical representative with the squadron.

In making the presentation, General White said:

"There is a great deal about reliability and flexibility which can be answered only by sustained experience with the new products. We have only to review the tremendous progress that has been made in recent years to get an idea of the even greater contributions that we can expect our scientists, designers and production experts to make to the defense system of the future. Even so, I believe we can assume there will always be some requirements the manned airplane can fulfill best."

Brig. Gen. Cecil E. Combs, Deputy Director Personnel Training, Hq., USAF, presented the Air Training Command Interceptor-Instructor-of-the-Year award to Maj. William F. Turner, USAF, of Perrin AFB, Tex., as the best Air Training Command Interceptor teacher.

Maj. Gen. Winston P. Wilson, Chief of the Air Force Division, National Guard Bureau, presented the trophy which bears his name to the 179th Fighter In-

AF Secy. Sees Need for $2 Billion More In FY '59 to Maintain Defense Level

The Armed Forces will need an increased appropriation of $2 billion for Fiscal Year '59, over and above the amount that Congress will provide this year, according to Secretary of the Air Force James H. Douglas.

Speaking at the Air Force Association's annual Awards Banquet in Washington, D. C., 3 August, Secretary Douglas emphasized that without an increased appropriation for the next fiscal year, "it will be difficult to maintain a Defense spending level of $38 billion, to say nothing of raising it."

Referring to the present cut-back in defense appropriations, the Air Force Secretary said: "It of course distresses me that we have to postpone or eliminate certain programs, but I am not apprehensive about our ability to provide a great Air Force."

The problem of reduced spending, said Mr. Douglas, is "tough because at the same time that we are modernizing our manned aircraft forces, we have to establish operational missile forces."

Total defense appropriations for this year, FY 1958, are expected to reach $33.7 billion of which the Air Force will get $15.9 billion.

Among the new developments slated to be put into operational use in the Air Force, Secretary Douglas cited an air-to-surface missile to be carried by the B-52. The medium-range, supersonic B-58, he said, is already in flight test and is "doing well."

Claiming recent success in "retaining the average enlisted man," the Secretary warned "our record in retaining the skilled man is not so reassuring." To improve the present personnel problem, he said the Air Force plans to carry out "in a limited way certain recommendations of the Cordiner Committee."

$100 PROBLEM

The Air Force Finance Center at Denver, Colo., recently received a letter from a former airman, who wrote:

"To hum this may consurn. I got a letter from my wife telling me I had a check from you all, but hur and I are busted up, & far spite she wont send it to me, so I was wondering if you could send me one, & I will return the one she has if she ever sends it to me, which I dauth."

An effort is being made to recover the check, which represents payment of $100 mustering-out pay.

MRS. H. H. ARNOLD, widow of the World War II commander of the U. S. Air Force admires the Hughes Achievement Award, presented 3 Aug. to members of the 512th Fighter Interceptor Squadron who fly F-86Ds out of Bentwaters, England. Members of the unit, considered by the Air Force to be their best air defense squadron, are (from left), Col. Hugh Manston, Commander 406th Wing; Capt. Cecil A. Laxton, M/Sgt. Edwin H. Christy, Capt. Roy A. Sweigard, M/Sgt. John W. White, Lt. Col. John Ruettgers, 512th commander; RAF Flight Lt. Ronald Williams, and Capt. Jay A. Daugherty. At far right is Col. A. R. DeBolt, national president of the Night Fighters.

ceptor Squadron, Duluth, Minn. The trophy was accepted by Lt. Col. Ralph M. Jerome, squadron commander. The trophy is donated by North American Aviation, Northrup Aircraft, and Lockheed Aircraft.

An Honorary Membership award in the Association was presented to General Earl E. Partridge, Commander in Chief of the Continental Air Defense Command. He in turn presented special awards to the crew members who participated in the firing of the first live atomic warhead air-to-air rocket. They were: Capt. Alfred Barbee, radar observer and weaponeer, and Capt. Eric Hutchison, pilot of the delivery aircraft; 1st Lt. Burford Culpepper, pilot, and 1st Lt. James Jones, radar observer and weaponeer, of the backup aircraft; and Capt. Alvin G. Moore, pilot, and 1st Lt. Robert E. Gee, radar observer and flight test engineer, of the effects aircraft.

A special NFA Exceptional Service Award was presented to Gil Nettleton, jr., vice president of Northrup International.

Col. Arthur R. DeBolt, Assistant to the Vice President, North American Aviation, president of the Association, presided. At the conclusion of the lunch he turned his duties over to Col. William C. O'Dell, USAF, of the Air Force Headquarters, who is the newly elected president.

COL. WILLIAM B. MARTENSON is the acting commander of Carswell's 11th Bomb Wing while Col. Samuel is on temporary duty at Castle AFB, Calif.

USAF WOOS WIVES

So important are Service wives in the retention of career men, that the Air Force now spends as much time to retain the wives as it does the airmen.

Col. Barney Oldfield, USAF, Director, Information Services, Continental Air Defense Command, speaking at the Women's luncheon in connection with the Air Force Association meeting in Washington, D. C., said that studies of the huge losses in money due to failures to stay with the Air Force as a career revealed that "women were the ones who more often than not were the source of dissatisfaction among our airmen."

"Their dissatisfaction," he said, "ranged from low pay to mobility, and we now spend as much time trying to retain the wife as we do the airman."

COL. DANIEL F. SHARP, USAF, Commander of the 3243d Test Group who later left Eglin AFB, Fla., to attend the Air War College at Maxwell AFB, Ala., receives Commendation Ribbon. A review and 12-plane fly-by was held by the 3241st and 3243d Test Groups in the colonel's honor. The award was presented by Brig. Gen. Ernest K. Warburton (right), Commander of the Air Force Operational Test Center. Also receiving the Commendation Ribbon during the ceremony were Lt. Col. John J. Kropenick, Maj. L. L. Wood and Capt. Robert J. Nowak.

AFA Provides National Air Show For Air Force. The Air Force Association's convention in Washington, D. C., last week, celebrating the Golden Anniversary of the Air Force, stepped in and, as far as the Air Force is concerned, filled the vacuum created by the shutting down of the National Aircraft Shows formerly held annually. A gigantic Air Show at Andrews AFB Sunday opened the week's festivities. It was put on by the Air Force and sponsored by the AFA. It included the Bendix Trophy Race, one of the annual speed classics formerly a feature of the old National Aircraft Shows. It also included flybys and static exhibits of many new Air Force aircraft hitherto not shown to the public. The extent of public interest in such air shows was evidenced by the fact that more than 70,000 persons fought through a terrific traffic jam to get to Andrews. That admission to this show at a military air base was free whereas the old National Aircraft Shows used to charge general admission and reserve seat fees did not detract from the public appeal nor the enthusiasm shown by the spectators.

Furthermore, on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of last week, the AFA put on an impressive "Airpower Panorama," wherein 115 manufacturers of aircraft, missiles, engines, accessories, and electronics set up exhibits of their wares in the D. C. National Guard Armory where admission likewise was free to the public.

The AFA sessions themselves drew more than 3,000 members, industry representatives, and guests from all over the country to hear a star-studded array of Air Force civilian and military leaders report on what the Air Force has done, what it proposes to do, and what it needs. Reports in this week's and last week's issues of THE JOURNAL show the scope and importance of these presentations.

The National Aircraft Shows, an outgrowth of the earlier annual Cleveland Air Races, had been held annually since 1929, except for the war years. Their three-day sessions usually attracted 200,000 to 300,000 spectators. It was one occasion where those who fly in all of the Armed Services and in civilian pursuits met in a spirit of comradeship. It was supported by paid admissions and by manufacturers who bought space to display their products. It was cancelled because the Department of Defense declined to permit further participation of military aircraft in such a large single event. This was a death blow to the operators of the Show who had come to depend more and more upon the air arms of the military forces to put on the spectacular flying demonstrations which attracted the crowds. Unfortunately, it left the United States as the only great nation without a national air show—the British have their annual Farnborough show, the French hold one in Paris, and even the Russians have been attracting world-wide attention with their show at Moscow.

As far as the Air Force is concerned, the AFA has successfully replaced the old National Aircraft Shows.

There is no doubt, however, but that representatives of the other facets of military aviation—the Navy, Marine Corps, and Army—are unhappy that nothing has been organized to fully replace for them the three-day annual national spotlight supplied by the old National Aircraft Shows. Civil aviation, too, should have some such national spectacular to show its wares in a dramatic fashion.

The AFA is performing a tremendously valuable function for the Air Force. What is to be done for Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and civilian aviation?

Support Career Pay. Despite all the efforts of its powerful opponents, the Cordiner career incentive pay bill just won't stay down. To the number of major metropolitan newspapers which have been giving educational editorial support to the plan there is now added the Scripps-Howard Newspapers. Jim Lucas, Scripps-Howard Staff Writer, has begun a series of articles on the Cordiner plan which are being published in newspapers throughout the nation. Mr. Lucas has been intimately associated with the Armed Services since the beginning of World War II when he served as Marine Combat Correspondent in the Pacific from Guadalcanal to Iwo Jima. A Pulitzer Prize winning reporter, he has covered all of the Services throughout the world. The Scripps-Howard articles are making a detailed analysis of the Cordiner plan and what it would do to put the Services on a sound basis by reducing personnel turnover, saving money, and increasing efficiency.

Giving their individual support to the plan, the Scripps-Howard papers have also been carrying strong editorials backing the plan. The Washington Daily News, for example, recommends that its readers follow Mr. Lucas' series of articles, and adds: "In our opinion, neither Congress nor the Defense Department, to date, has given this plan proper attention."

Strong backing also came from the national convention of the Air Force Association which adopted a resolution endorsing "without reservation" the findings of the Cordiner Committee and urging Congress to take "immediate and favorable action."

There are many, in and out of the Administration, who would like to see the career incentive pay plan killed. But every time it is put down, it comes back up again. If such support continues during the coming recess, the next session of Congress can hardly avoid giving the plan the thorough study it deserves.

QUOTES FROM THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago (9 Aug. 1947)—It is to be noted that Mr. Atlee included in his program for rehabilitation a notice that Great Britain does not intend to spend any more money on feeding Germany when the existing agreement runs out, a notice which only means an increase in the help we must extend to that former enemy.

50 Years Ago (10 Aug. 1907)—A correspondent who has just returned from a trip to the Philippines, China and Japan says: "The Japs are a cocky lot, but until they recover from the Russian War, say for ten years, they cannot fight the United States or any strong power. They also realize that Russia is waiting for the opportunity to avenge her humiliation."

90 Years Ago (10 Aug. 1867)—The President has informed Secretary Stanton that considerations of a high character constrain him to say that his resignation as Secretary of War will be accepted. Mr. Stanton has replied, acknowledging the receipt of the President's note, and saying, "that public considerations of a high character, which alone have induced me to continue at the head of this Department, constrain me not to resign the office of the Secretary of War before the next meeting of Congress."

A Slur on the Retired

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I note in your 13 July issue the Comptroller General's opposition to the time honored obligation of the Government to the increase of pay of regular officers of the Armed Forces now on the retired list.

I believe it is incumbent upon your editorial staff to immediately take issue with that official, and to continue your opposition. The C. G.'s position cannot be accepted for the good of the country and it must be challenged as a slur upon the faithful service of our regular officers. It will most certainly have serious repercussions on the Corps of Officers of the Army—Navy—Marine Corps and Air Force.

The pay (not pension) of a regular retired officer with over 30 years of service has always been based on 3/4ths of the active duty pay of his contemporary on the active list.

Officers from Farragut to Eisenhower have loyally served our government believing the government would always remember its obligations.

Let us not permit a misguided bureaucrat to dictate changes that can and will hurt the hardcore of "professional officers" who have been the backbone in our past wars and will be the backbone of any effort in future conflicts.

W. A. WORTON
MAJOR GENERAL
U. S. MARINE CORPS (RET.)

Cancelled Navy Slogan?

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I note in your 18 May issue you state that the Navy post office serving MAAG, Viet-Nam post marks the envelopes with the comment that "The Importance of the Navy is Increasing."

It was told to me on fairly good authority that an Army sergeant working in this same Navy post office became tired of seeing this statement on all letters. So he had a new stamp made which said "The Importance of the Navy is Decreasing," and had the new stamp surreptitiously substituted for the old, where it was used by Navy personnel for many moons.

True, or not, I believe the story.

7th Inf. Reg. Assoc.

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The Seventh Infantry Regiment has recently completed the organization of the "Seventh Infantry Regiment Historical Association." The president of the Association is our present Commanding Officer, Col. William M. Summers. The Association was deemed necessary to properly maintain and display the many historically significant retired colors, trophies, and battle awards of the Regiment.

We are dispatching this letter in the hope that you may assist us publicity-wise in announcing the establishment of our Association to all former members of the Seventh Infantry Regiment.

As you may be aware, we feel the Seventh is the most colorful Regiment in the United States Army. Some of our trophies and our National and Organizational Colors date back to the Civil War. The Seventh has 60 Campaign Streamers, more than any other Infantry Regiment in the Army. Members of the Seventh were awarded 14 Medals of Honor in the last two wars. Our origin dates back to 1812 and it was in that year in the Battle of New Orleans that the Regiment assumed the nickname, "Cotton-balers."

As of this date, we have 1026 members in the Association. Membership is open to all present and former members. All former Seventh Infantry personnel may request Association Membership Applications by writing to the Adjutant, 1st Battle Group, 7th Infantry Regiment, Ft. Benning, Ga.

The Association would be more than happy to hear from former members of the Seventh and in addition, if any former member is in possession of any trophies, pictures or souvenirs acquired while serving in the Regiment and would like to loan or donate the article, we would be most appreciative.

The Association is making attempts to procure trophies and souvenirs from the Indian Wars, Civil War, Spanish-American War and Philippine Insurrection, as well as from World War I and II and Korea.

Fiscal '58 Budget Shows Many Ups and Downs In Pentagon Statements

The ups and downs of the military budget for the current fiscal year have been recapitulated by Senator Dennis Chavez (D-NM), Chairman of the Senate Military Appropriations Subcommittee.

Because of the last-minute order to reduce military personnel (on the eve of final action on the budget by House and Senate conferees), Senator Chavez said the Senate was fortunate in getting the House "to agree to anything."

Another member of the subcommittee, Senator Allen J. Ellender (D-La.), said what's more the House conferees stated that if they had known of the manpower reduction they would have cut another billion dollars from the Defense Department request.

Here is the chronology of action on the military budget:

January—The President asked the Congress to approve a budget of $36.1 billion for the Armed Forces for fiscal '58.

April—The President told the House that $16 million could be withheld from Army "procurement and production" if the House so desired.

May—Defense Secretary Wilson issued a memorandum to the Secretaries of the three Services withholding $500 million of the funds available from obligatory availability during the remainder of fiscal '57.

May—The House approved a military budget of $33.5 billion.

May—Secretary Wilson told the Senate Committee that cuts of the magnitude proposed by the House "would amount to gambling unwisely with the security of the Nation."

May—Admiral Radford said "Large cuts in the budget . . . in the opinion of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, would risk the security of the Nation and the free world."

May—Army Secretary Brucker said the reductions indicated by the House "will have a severe impact on many of our activities."

May—Army Chief of Staff General Taylor said "the Army needs every dollar of the President's 1958 budget if it is to be able to field and fight the Army forces which are essential to our security."

May—Secretary of the Navy Gates said the Navy "cannot absorb reductions of the magnitude recommended without seriously impairing certain programs."

May—Admiral Burke, Chief of Naval Operations, said the Navy budget "cannot be reduced without serious effect upon well-considered programs essential to our national security."

May—Air Force Secretary Douglas said the budget request for the Air Force involved "a minimum of funds."

May—Air Force Chief of Staff General Twining said the budget already had been "reduced to a point which lies in what I consider to be a dangerous area" before it went to the Capitol.

June—Secretary Wilson wrote to the Senate Committee and requested restoration of $1.2 billion of the amount cut from the budget by the House.

June—Assistant Secretary of the Army Rodrick told the Committee the House reductions "would cut into the bone and muscle of the Army and reduce its ability to execute its combat mission."

June—The Senate Appropriations Committee approved and the Senate passed a military budget of $34.5 billion, restoring almost a billion dollars of the House cut.

July—House and Senate conferees met to iron out their differences.

July—Secretary Wilson advised the conferees of plans "approved by the President" to reduce military manpower by 108,135 officers and men. He added that the House cut in military personnel funds could stand as is, and that certain House reductions in operation and maintenance accounts, which had been restored by the Senate, could now be cut again.

July—The conferees agreed on a total of $33.7 billion.

Four Out of Five Robins Wherry Units Substandard

Five hundred privately-owned Wherry Housing units have been purchased by the Air Force at Robins AFB, Ga.

One hundred of the units have been designated as "adequate quarters" and occupants will forfeit quarters allowance. The remaining 400 units will continue to be leased on a rental basis while modifications are made to bring them up to minimum standards.

Eventually, all 500 units will become public quarters.

House Report Hits Navy, AF; Army Escapes; Approve $1.5 Billion For Military Building

The Navy and Air Force were blistered in a House Appropriations Committee report this week. The Army escaped unscathed.

In reporting approval of a $1.5 billion military construction program for the current fiscal year, the Committee charged the Navy with ineffective leadership in formulating, justifying and implementing its building program.

The Air Force was criticized for "lack of concern" in keeping the cost of the new Air Force Academy within bounds. The Committee declared that the Academy "should be a first-class facility in which the American people can take pride; but it should not be a monument to governmental extravagance."

The $1.5 billion program approved by the Committee is $243.2 million less than the Pentagon had requested. It includes $3.05 million for the Army, $265 million for the Navy and $900 million for the Air Force.

It also embraces $5.5 million for the construction of Coast Guard loran stations; $34.2 million, to be derived by transfer, for the United States Scientific Satellite, and $46 million for the Army Reserve Forces.

Of the requested funds, the Air Force lost $100 million, the Navy, $70 million and the Army, $20 million. In addition, requested funds for Army and Navy Reserve Forces were reduced by $9 and $10 million, respectively.

The Committee criticized the Navy for lack of "sound and realistic programming" in its construction program. More than 150 previously approved projects are being held up or delayed, the Committee said despite the fact that they were approved by the Congress on the basis of Navy testimony that they "were firm and realistic requirements."

Navy methods have "consistently failed to formulate and carry out military construction programs sorely needed by the naval shore establishment," the Committee charged. The report directs the Navy to "make a detailed study of the present methods used in controlling the program."

Air Force Academy

The Committee reduced construction funds for the Air Forces Academy by $8.3 million, the amount requested for the air field complex to be constructed on the Academy site. The air field "is certainly not an urgent item and should be postponed for further consideration," the Committee stated.

A request to increase the cost limitation on a house for the Academy Superintendent from $75,000 to $97,500 also was disapproved. The $75,000 house, which doesn't include the cost of the land, roads or utilities, is entirely adequate," the report states.

The Committee charged that "the Congress and the American people were sold an Air Force Academy that was not to exceed the total cost of $126 million. Yet, these previous commitments appear to have been largely ignored by responsible Air Force officials and the Congress and is now requested to approve additional millions for this institution."

memo

UNLIKE ANY OTHER JCS CHAIRMAN, General Twining next week takes over the nation's top military post under a dictate to keep Service spending at a specific checkpoint—$38 billion. This means that from the moment he takes office, the former AF Chief will be confronted with the task of leading the Chiefs, if this is possible, to agreement on a military structure that must see all Services take cuts from previous plans.

ASIDE FROM A BRIEF PERIOD just before Korea, the JCS by and large has been able to come to accord on force levels. A major reason for this was the fact that enough funds were provided to give the Air Force most of the wings it deemed essential, the Army most of the divisions it contended were urgent, the Navy the ships, including large carriers, it declared vital, and the Marines sufficient manpower for the three divisions and three air wings specified in law.

BUT NEXT YEAR'S BUDGET will be different. Simply stated, there will not be enough money to give each Service the force level that each of the Chiefs deems a minimum requirement for adequate national security.

AS A CONSEQUENCE, General Twining will not be able to bring the Chiefs around with a little give and take here and there. From the day he takes office, he will be required to lead the JCS into new approaches to solution of force level problems.

IF THE JCS MEMBERS fail to reach agreement on force levels within the $38 billion ceiling, the Secretary of Defense and the President, having specified the funds limit in advance, will take the initiative away from the Chiefs and end the wrangling by determining the number of wings, divisions, combatant vessels, etc. for the year starting next July.

WHAT ABOUT CONGRESS? The fiscal squeeze is constricting Capitol control of the funding of military forces, thereby reducing the execution of a Constitutional requirement. Military officials spend days in detailed budget testimony concerning programs that are approved and then changed—as this fiscal year—even before the President signs the appropriations bill.

THE INFLATION IRRITANT that is driving defense costs up will stir energetic discussion among the Chiefs, among the Service Secretaries, between the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Treasury and, finally, between the Administration and Congress. The FY '59 budget seems destined to become the most controversial fiscal exercise since Unification.

THE NATION'S RESERVE FORCES face a priority overhaul as a result of the economy drive. SecDef Wilson repeatedly has said that the buildup plans for the Reserve and National Guard require a "new look."

A BIG PROBLEM, notably in the officer area, is that a slash in the Reserve Program could thwart hundreds from earning P.L. 810 retirement at age 60 after 20 years' creditable service. One answer could be to permit certain officers to earn retirement in a non-pay status.

THE PENTAGON MAY WAIT until Congress goes home before telling of plans to revamp the Reserve Forces. There's no question that the Reserve Officers Association and the National Guard Association will counterattack sharply against any cutbacks, and these groups are not without influence on Capitol Hill.

BEGINNING THIS MONTH, thousands of soldiers completing two year draft tours become eligible for mandatory service in the Reserve Forces. It will be interesting to see how the Defense Department imposes this obligation.

THE AIR FORCE WILL INTENSIFY recruiting efforts to gain more six-month Reserve volunteers. Reserve wing commanders are counting on this source of manpower to help fill thousands of vacancies in the Reserve manning tables.

SECDEF WILSON IS READY to sign the order that will put his proficiency pay raise plan for enlisted men into effect. The paper work has been completed. Everything's set, but a last minute complication still is possible.

THE BUDGET BUREAU HAS INDICATED it wants a final look at the Pentagon's $49 million raise scheme for enlisted specialists. Mr. Wilson, of course, had Budget Bureau and White House approval of the plan when he announced it in May.

IT REMAINS TO BE SEEN whether Secretary Wilson, already once rebuffed by the Budget Bureau in his efforts to modernize military pay, will go through the process of asking the BoB to approve line by line the proficiency pay regulations. THE SERVICES ARE HOPEFUL that in this instance Mr. Wilson advises the BoB to stick to its figures and allow the Defense Department to operate the Services.

ON THE PAY FRONT, Secretary Wilson's aides were busy this week drafting responses to 59 questions put to the Pentagon by Senator Stennis (D-Miss), chairman of the Armed Services Subcommittee that will look into pay legislation. Presumably, Mr. Wilson's responses will have to be cleared with the Budget Bureau. That means the Pentagon will play down the potential $5 billion savings estimated by the Cordiner Committee.

JOINT U.S.-CANADIAN Air Defense is brought closer to reality by the new "ADCANUS" Command under Gen. Earle E. Partridge, USAF, and the inclusion of Canadian military personnel in his over-all command. Canadians would feel happier, however, if U.S. cooperation were extended to the lifting of the tariff barrier. U.S. built aircraft enter Canada free of duty, but Canadian manufacturers are charged 15% duty when they sell planes in the U.S.

THE ARMY'S TEST of what it calls "higher performance" aircraft—the Cessna T-37 Air Force jet trainer—will shift this autumn from the Army Aviation Center at Ft. Rucker, Ala., to the Artillery and Missile Center at Ft. Sill, Okla., Armor Center at Ft. Knox, Ky., and Infantry Center at Ft. Benning, Ga. The Army, which originally was supposed to get some T-37's of its own, has been given three on loan from the Air Force for evaluation.

THERE'S LITTLE DOUBT the Army study will conclude that speedier aircraft are essential for target acquisition and observation missions in support of the combat arms. There's little doubt also in view of the tight budget pinch that the Army will find it tough going to get early DoD approval for procurement of jet aircraft.

Ft. Benning Doughboy

Statue Arrives In Fall

A bronze-cast replica of the famous
American Doughboy statue in Berlin,
Germany, has been scheduled to arrive in the U. S. this Fall.

It will be erected as a permanent memorial to the Army Infantryman at the Army Infantry Training Center, Ft.
Benning, Ga.

Depicting an infantryman in combat dress, holding an M-1 rifle in parade rest position, the statue was executed by a German firm at the direction of Maj.
Gen. Herbert B. Powell, Infantry Center
Commander. Its sculptor is Ernest Kunst.

Funds for erection of that statue were raised through voluntary subscriptions under a special "Follow Me" fund established by Maj. Gen. G. S. Meloy, Jr, Army
Chief of Information and former commander of the Infantry Center, as one of his last official acts before leaving Ft.
Benning in 1954.

Final fund raising campaign has begun to raise the remaining $3,500 needed to complete the project.

AFOTC DROPS 2 TEST GROUPS

A major change in the organizational structure of the Air Proving Ground Command's Air Force Operational Test Center, Eglin AFB, Fla., has been put into effect.

The organizational change consisted of the combining of the 3244th Test Group (Transport and Equipment) with the 3245th Test Group (Bombardment) to form the 3245th Test Group (Bombardment and Transport). Another change to take place 15 Aug. is the combining of the 3243d Test Group (Fighter) with the 3241st Test Group (Interceptor) to form the 3241st Test Group (Fighter and Interceptor).

The reorganization is said to effect savings without reduction to the Employment and Suitability Testing within the Center.

Commanders of the new 3241st Test Group and the 3245th Test Group are Col. George L. Jones and Col. Joe C. Briley, respectively.

SERVICE HOSPITALS REPORT FEWER BABIES

Fewer babies are being born in military hospitals as a result of the Dependents Medical Care Act.

The Pentagon has reported to the Senate Armed Services Committee that the obstetric workload in military hospitals decreased by "roughly 20 per cent" during the first six months after the new Act went into effect.

So far, this is the only "identifiable trend" which has resulted from the new rules permitting Service families to use civilian hospitals, although it "appears" that a reduction in the overall workload of military hospitals "will approximate two per cent."

In connection with the change in obstetrics care, the Pentagon report notes that hospitals of the military medical services previously "were crowded with obstetric cases" but now many dependents are taking advantage of the new Act and utilizing the services of civilian physicians.

The Department said it has "no confirmed report as to whether or not it [the Act] has caused crowding in civilian hospitals."

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of the Treasury—George M. Humphrey
Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond

THE 1957 Board of Visitors of the Coast Guard Academy has expressed "alarm and amazement" that wartime wooden buildings are being used in New London, Conn., for barracks, classrooms and laboratories.

The Board, headed by Representative George P. Miller (D-Calif.), told Congress that the use of outmoded structures constitutes a fire hazard and, in addition, results in excessive maintenance and repair costs.

In its report, the Board stated that the elimination of these structures should be given number one priority by Congress. It expressed the opinion that an expansion program should be undertaken to enlarge the facilities at the Academy.

The Academy originally was designed to accommodate 300 cadets, but is handling approximately 500.

Seven projects were recommended by the Board on a priority basis.

They are:

1. Replacement of wooden barracks for both the Cadet Corps and the Officer Induction Schools.

2. Replacement of wooden buildings for classrooms and administration of Officer Induction Schools.

3. Replacement of wooden auditorium.

4. Supplemental laboratory space to eliminate overcrowding during chemical experiments.

5. Enlargement of mess hall and administration facilities.

6. Improvement of athletics and recreational facilities, such as replacement of wooden grandstands, enlargement of athletic area, and repair of waterfront facilities.

7. Relocation of entrance gate and enlargement of Academy garage to provide greater safety conditions.

Plane Funds OK'd

The House Appropriations Committee has approved a supplemental appropriation of $8.1 million for procurement of new planes for the Coast Guard. The Coast Guard asked for $8.2 million.

The Committee slashed the entire amount from the regular annual appropriations bill for 1958, when the Treasury Department failed to submit to the Committee a requested report on the Coast Guard's replacement program.

The Committee emphasized that the funds are to be used to purchase and remodel over-age planes and does not constitute an endorsement of the Coast Guard's long-range plan of replacement.

The overall program will be considered at greater length when the Fiscal Year 1959 recommendations are made, the Committee said.

Ultramodern Travel For Military Goods

Military shipments of household goods destined for Germany may travel a good deal of the way in ultra-modern "houses on wheels," according to Frank J. McKee, President of National Van Lines.

The revolutionary vehicles, each containing two bunks and a modern lavatory, enable drivers to arrive refreshed and clean after a long, cross-country trip. In addition, extra space is provided to carry several extra men, in case added manpower is needed for loading and unloading cargo.

Military shipments were begun by National under their "Sea-Van-Tote" program.

Col. McComsey Named VP & Treas. of USAA

Col. Charles E. Cheever, USA-Ret., President of United Services Automobile Association of San Antonio, Tex., has announced the appointment by USAA's Board of Directors of Col. John A. McComsey, USA-Ret., as Vice President and Treasurer.

Col. McComsey is a graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, Class of 1924, having been appointed as a Cadet from the State of Pennsylvania. Upon graduation, he was commissioned in the Coast Artillery and specialized in anti-aircraft artillery.

Major Gains Scored In Radar Gear

Hailed as "probably the greatest single advance in radar since the start of World War II and early British work," new techniques increasing the power of radar in "extremely large, effective amounts" have been developed by Columbia University under contract to the Air Force Research and Development Command.

Details were made public 9 July. The new techniques do not actually increase the power used. Instead, they employ a method of "signal enhancement" which raises the strength of a radar signal reflected from an aircraft or missile "to an unprecedentedly high level."

This was described as being of particular significance for radar installations in regions like the Arctic, where it is extremely difficult to supply fuel and other facilities for producing large amounts of power.

Scientists associated with the program said that recent military developments, particularly the use of high speed aircraft and missiles, resulted in a need to increase radar ranges.

In addition to the effects of increased aircraft and missile speeds, it was explained that jet bombers and high-speed missiles are very poor reflectors of radar signals compared to multi-engine propeller-driven craft. This also necessitates greater radar power.

Even more significance is attached to the new radar development, said scientists, because of its potential use with General Electric Laboratories' new computer which automatically guides interceptor planes to approaching enemy aircraft.

Col. Lattin to Richmond

Col. John H. Lattin, a regular Army Airborne officer and master paratrooper who has made almost 300 jumps, has reported as Chief of the US Army Military District of Virginia replacing Col. Robert G. Turner who has retired from active duty.

PX People Warned Against Free Meals

Army and Air Force Exchange personnel have been told to avoid luncheon or dinner engagements with business representatives.

The only exceptions to this policy, stated in AFR 147-7A and Change 1 to AR 60-10, are cases where such engagements cannot be avoided without personal embarrassment or because of business necessity.

Even in these cases, the regulation states, "every effort will be made to reciprocate."

Gift and conflict of interest policies applicable to Exchange personnel are contained in the regulations.

JOURNAL Readers Are Constant

Four out of every five JOURNAL subscribers renew their subscriptions year after year. The reason: THE JOURNAL gives the military officer the best news coverage and analyses of matters that concern him most.

G-E Gets Navy Awards; Aerojet Builds Nike Warheads; ARDC Contracts Reported

RADIO CORPORATION OF AMERICA'S West Coast Division, in cooperation with the Air Research and Development Command, has developed a simplified, compact and relatively inexpensive radar set designed to reveal paths through squall lines for Air Force aircraft not normally equipped with radar. The "dwarf" weather avoidance radar, designated the AN/APS-69, weighs less than 70 pounds and, with the exception of scope, is contained in a wing pod measuring 15 1/2 inches in diameter and 48 inches in length. It is reported to cost one-third the price of radar normally used in administrative airplanes.

AMERICAN LITHIUM INSTITUTE has been awarded an ARDC contract for the preparation of a comprehensive handbook on lithium and its compounds.

PRESSTITE-KEYSTONE Engineering Products Company has prepared a users manual for application of the company's No. 99 sealer, used on commercial and military airfield joint paving where jet blast, heat and fuel resistance are essential characteristics.

Pay Hearing Hopes

quantity and quality." It was the view of the AFA that "the United States already has relinquished supremacy in numbers of modern aircraft to the Soviet Union even though numerical superiority continues to be essential to counteract the Soviet advantage of initiative and surprise." The AFA said "supremacy in quality of airpower is being threatened by rapid Soviet gains."

GENERAL MAXWELL D. TAYLOR has sounded a new appeal for pay raise action. In a special report covering the two year period ending 30 June 1957, the Army Chief of Staff, states:

"If the Army is to retain highly skilled leaders and soldiers, higher military pay scales in the future are indispensable."

General Taylor Tells New Challenges That Will Confront Army Planners

(General Maxwell D. Taylor has just issued a special report covering the period from 1 July 1955 to 30 June 1957. He concludes the report with a section called "The Challenges of the Future," published herewith in its entirety.)

THE future reveals clearly that the Army will continue its role of providing a maximum contribution to the deterrence of war within the guide lines set forth in its National Military Program. However, the Army will have to solve increasingly difficult problems in its efforts to balance its categories of military forces to meet, in order of priority, the requirements of cold war, limited war, and general atomic war.

There will be a continuing need for Army forces deployed in strategic areas overseas in sufficient strength and with an M-Day readiness in order to comprise an effective deterrent to limited and general war.

As a visible ready-force to help deter war in any form and to provide the means to win a small war quickly if deterrence fails, the Strategic Army Forces also should be maintained at the present eight-division level with the necessary combat and logistical support units.

In addition to maintaining its overseas deployments and Strategic Army Forces at a high level of combat-readiness, the Army is faced with expanding requirements in at least two of its programs. The first is the Reserve Program. The Army must possess the capability of generating reserve strength as rapidly as it deploys active Army units overseas in the event of war. Consequently, the Army is placing increased emphasis on improving the combat-readiness of its reserve forces. As a result of the benefits of the six months training program for National Guardsmen and Reservists, reserve units will ultimately be filled with trained men thereby reducing the time required to prepare these units for combat. However, to attain the essential levels of readiness for reserve forces requires increased expenditures for armories and training which must be provided from within an Army budget which is expected to remain at approximately its present level.

A similar situation exists with respect to the Army's surface-to-air missiles which contribute to the air defense of the Nation. The Army recognizes the need to increase progressively the number of its missile units in order to deter a surprise air attack on the United States. However, since the growing cost of these units, in terms of money and manpower, must be provided from relatively fixed resources, this contribution to the deterrence of general atomic war must be balanced with the need for flexible and mobile forces designed to cope with all possible forms of future conflict.

Structure-wise, the new Army divisions are adaptable to the anticipated conditions of future warfare. In addition, technological success is providing the Army with improved firepower, mobility, and communications which will permit the development of new tactics, techniques, and logistical procedures required to generate maximum effectiveness for the newly designed units.

However, to burden further the military planner, the finite resources available to the Army are a prime determinant of the rate and direction of modernization of Army forces. The Army is finding that the cost of new weapons and equipment is greater than anticipated.

Also, if the Army is to retain highly skilled leaders and soldiers, higher military pay scales in the future are indispensable.

Thus, the expanding requirements of the reserve and air defense programs, the rising costs of weapons and equipment, and the need for increased pay scales coupled with the inflationary trend in the Nation's economy demand the most effective use of Army resources. If the Army is to live within its limited resources, it must be certain that it is placing "first things first" and utilize its dollars and its manpower for those activities which contribute directly to the deterrence of war and combat effectiveness on the battlefield.

During the period of this report, the Army has made significant progress in armament, organization, tactics, and administration. Much of this progress has been due to the able leadership of the Secretary of the Army, the Under Secretary, and their Assistant Secretaries who have shown deep insight in the manpower, logistical, fiscal, and military problems inherent in the administration of the Army.

It has been fitly said that the Army can be no better than the men and women who compose it.

Fortunately, the Army has attracted to its ranks a dedicated body of soldiers and civilians willing to undertake the challenging problems of shaping the modern Army and responsive to the appeal of a strenuous life fraught with heavy responsibilities for the security of the Nation.

F-100 Unit To Europe

The 509th Fighter Bomber Squadron at Langley AFB, Va., equipped with North American F-100's, will deploy to Europe on a six-month rotational training plan in September.

While overseas, the squadron will be under operational control of United States Air Forces, Europe. After completion of training, the unit and its personnel will return to the 405th.

Comptroller General Rules On Dislocation

Service personnel transferred from one military installation to another in the same city or town are not entitled to dislocation allowances.

Such moves are not to be regarded as permanent changes of station, Joseph Campbell, Comptroller General of the United States, ruled in Decision B-131649.

AMC Moves Planned; Four Branches Will Shift

Decentralization will take the fore when three branches of the Air Materiel Command's Service Division, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, move to Memphis Air Service Depot, Tenn., and another moves to Hill AFB, Ogden, Utah.

On 1 September, the Memphis installation of AMC will be the new home of the Food Services, Subsistence, and Laundry and Dry Cleaning Branches. Technical management of the Air Ammunitions Branch will go to Hill.

Force Level Cuts Threaten Services

From first page—
requirement to reduce its maintenance and operations costs.

General Thomas D. White, General Twining's successor, took the occasion of his first major address as Chief of Staff to forecast further changes in the Air Force (page 3).

THE ARMY, which had begun the last fiscal year with 20 divisions, dipped to 17 on 2 August with announcement that the 1st Cavalry Division will be removed from Japan and its colors transferred to the 24th Infantry Division in Korea. The 24th will be removed from the active list.

Confronted with expanded responsibilities for air defense, the Army fears that mounting costs will mean further reductions in division strength before this fiscal year ends.

The impact of budget problems on Army planning is underscored in a special report by General Maxwell D. Taylor, Chief of Staff (Page 27).

THE MARINES, only Service to have a statutory minimum strength—three divisions and three air wings—will be hard-pressed to prevent skeleton units under a new manpower limit of 190,000, which likely will be reduced further during 1958.

The Marines said this week that the 9th Regiment, now in Japan, will be shifted to Okinawa (Page 6). This is in accord with the 21 June agreement between President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Kishi calling for withdrawal of U.S. ground forces, as is the shift of 1st Cavalry Division troops.

On the basis of past statements by Marine Corps Commandants, Leatherneck strength overseas will need to be reduced, either in the Pacific or Mediterranean, possibly both, if effective fighting units are to be maintained.

SECRETARY WILSON FOCUSED the fiscal impingement on force level plans at his last news conference. He said:

"Our estimate of $38 billion for our program made last December is not a good one, as the costs have kept creeping up month by month all this year. Materials increased in cost, labor increased in cost and the program costs more than we had forecast which makes the forecasts of 38 a very difficult one to achieve and an impossible one without an adjustment in the program. So we are in the process now of adjusting our programs downward."

The Secretary said the action by Congress in cutting the President's budget request (see Page 11) "means that the Congress is reflecting the opinion of the people that we have got to cut down our military expense."

The Secretary reported latest figures show that military spending has been at a rate of $40.2 billion per year, compared with a $38 billion Administration ceiling and the $36 billion in new money voted by Congress.

The new Secretary of Defense and General Twining will have sympathetic understanding at the Treasury Department, where former Secretary of the Navy and Deputy Defense Secretary Robert B. Anderson has replaced Secretary George M. Humphrey.

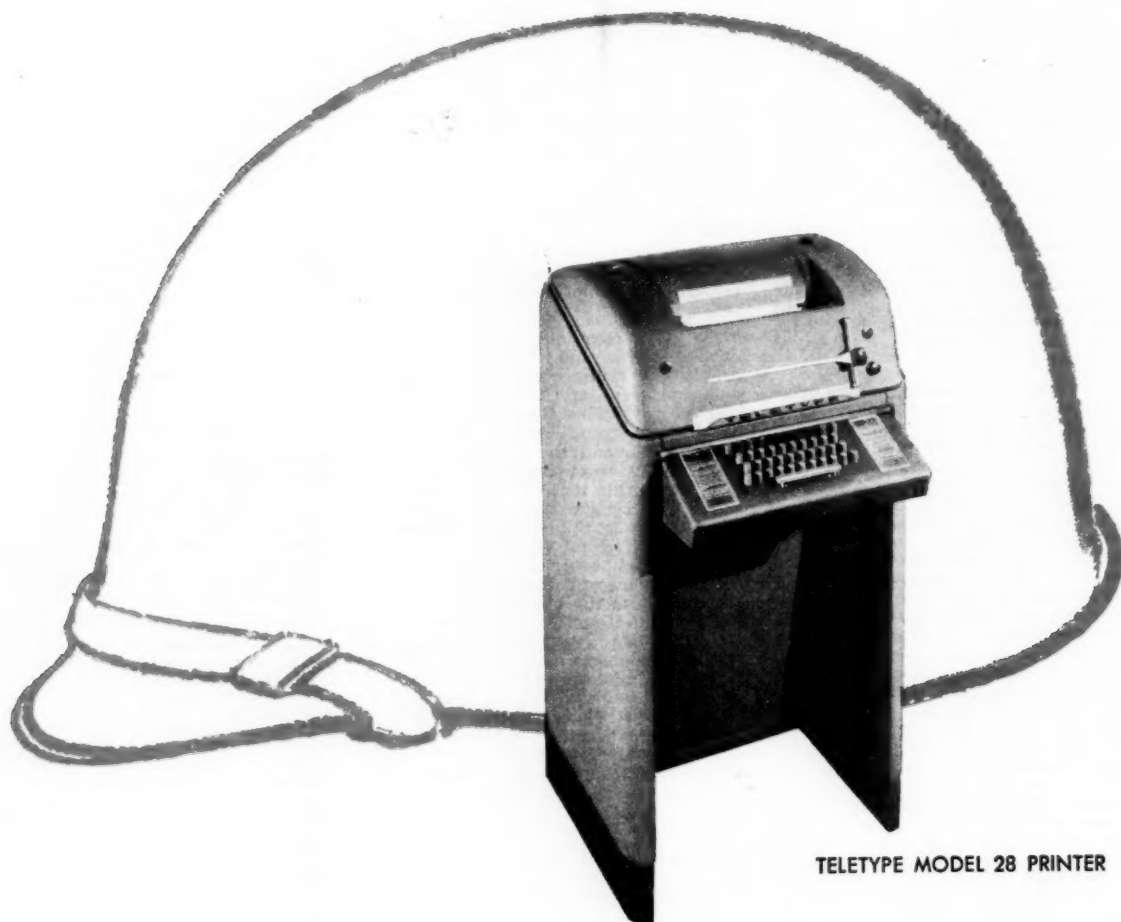

But Secretary Anderson is pinched by the fact that the Government's debt is perilously close to the $275 billion limit fixed by law.

THE UPSHOT WILL BE that the Services, as reported previously, soon will be separating thousands of men, and making preparations for new cuts—possibly coming before Christmas.

Scores of facilities will be ordered shut down or consolidated in the next few months. Many will be relatively small installations, but others will include activities of such size as hospitals and reception centers.

It's seen likely the Defense Department will close other hospitals in addition to Murphy Army Hospital at Waltham, Mass., and the Army-Navy General Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., which previously were scheduled to be inactivated but were kept going under Congressional pressure.

As the economy drive gathered momentum this week, and as changes in the top Pentagon command were about to be made, only a man who either had not surveyed the Treasury's problems or who possibly had seen unexpected trouble on the international horizon could anticipate that the Army won't be forced to cut additional divisions, the Navy "mothball" even more ships, the Air Force drop below 128 wings and the Marine Corps skeletonize its divisions and air wings, before the end of this fiscal year or at the start of the next.

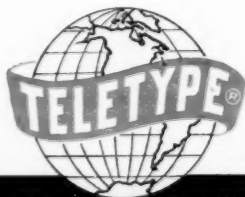

TELETYPE MODEL 28 PRINTER

On active duty!

Keeping military men and machines in close touch with each other via reliable printed communications has been Teletype's assignment in and out of war. The Model 28 Printer, for example, was designed with plenty of "reserve" for the extreme conditions encountered in military service. It will work well in harsh, unpredictable climates... take the shock of transportation, gunfire, shipboard vibration.

The machine takes such odds in its stride, performing smoothly, dependably at 100 words per minute. Moreover, it requires much less maintenance than conventional printers. The lubrication interval at 100 wpm is 1,500 hours of operation! No wonder this printer is on "active duty" everywhere—from the Aleutians to Hawaii, from Greenland to the equatorial jungles.

If you would like a copy of our booklet, "The ABC's of Teletype Equipment," write to Teletype Corporation, Dept. ANS, 4100 Fullerton Avenue, Chicago 39, Illinois.
